Sc 45	Clown still asleep. Frog crawls out of pool, and into clown's hat. Hat sails in the air, then strikes clown's head, awakening him with a start. He pursues the hat which proves very illusive. Finally, hat drops to the ground and frog crawls out. Frog stands upright and pitches hat right on to clown's head. Frog then swells up until it bursts. Clown gasps with astonishment. Explosion upsets clown and he falls into pool, head first.	43
Sc 45	Clown gradually sinking, meets sea horse, which he mounts backwards, and "rides" away. The horse tries to throw the rider, but he hangs on for a long time. Finally, the horse succeeds and swims rapidly away. Clown is then beset by a great many fish. He overcomes them and meets a mermaid who comes toward him with outstretched arms.	46
Sc 47	Close up mermaid	4
Sc 48	Mermaid continues to move toward clown. The little clown's heart jumps out of his throat and is immediately swallowed by a whale. The clown is swept away from his mermaid until he is on the surface of the water and can see her no more.	12
Sc 49	Clown on surface heartbroken. Sees vision of himself and mermaid at altar, with Neptune performing the ceremony. Vision fades out. Clown tugs and tugs at line and finally lands a whale which siezes him by the collar and drags him into the water again. He drops the clown to the bottom. The clown is picked up by a scorpion, and in his endeavor to escape he takes hold of the broken mast of a wreck which is anchored close by. But a swordfish swimming by, cuts through his anchorage and the clown is carried away and deposited in the jaws of a mighty whale.	69
Sc 50	Clown wakes up with a start, sees his hat on the floor, and crawls questioningly toward it.	8
Sc 51	Close up clown	4
Sub	"Holy mackerel! The boss certainly put dope into my ink this time!"	11
